CHAPTER XIV.

THE terrific impact of the huge ship on the sand among the breakers, which thundered and beat upon her sides with overwhelming force, came just in the nick of time for Morgan. Had the disaster been delayed a second longer the furious buccaneers would have cut him down where he stood. Even the officers were angered beyond measure at him for their present situation, which threatened the loss of the vast treasure already gained in the ship, although they had consented to Morgan's proposition to attack La Guayra and Caracas, and the captain was in no way responsible for the storm and the wreck which jeopardized their booty and their future. Therefore it is probable that none of them, unless it were Teach, would have interfered to save Morgan, and he would have been swept from his feet by the savage men and instantly killed in spite of all that he or Carib or any one else could have done. But the violence of the shock when the ship took ground threw them to the deck, and they forgot for the instant their bloody purpose of vengeance in the inevitableness of their approaching danger. They were checked in their mad anger for a few seconds and given a moment for reflection. That moment convinced them that they could not yet dispense with the services of their captain. With black rage and white fear striving for mastery in their hearts, they rose to their feet and confronted him with menacing faces and threatening gestures.

"What's to be done now?" questioned one bolder than the rest. "Now's the time," roared the undaunted Morgan, striving to make himself heard by all above the thundering seas, "to show your courage, lads!" He had quickly observed that the force with which she had been driven on the shoals had shoved the galleon's nose firmly in the sand. She had been caught just before she took ground by a tremendous roller and had been lifted up and hurled far over to starboard. Although almost on her beam ends, her decks inclining landward, the snugly built ship held steady in spite of the tremendous onslaughts of the seas along her bilge.

"Take heart, men!" he cried. "Observe. She lies still and secure. This is a great bolt and will take a tremendous doubt battering before she breaks. We may yet save ourselves." "Ah! the treasure!" roared one. "Yes, and the treasure." "I think the moon has about blown itself out," interpolated old Hornigold, shouting out at this instant. "Look you, mates," he cried, pointing to westward. "It clears! The sun'll set fair tonight."

"The boy's in right," cried Morgan. "But first of all we must take no chances with our lives. Even though we lose the ship we can seize another. The world is full of treasure, and we can find it. Now I want some one to carry a line ashore through the breakers. Who will volunteer?" "I," said Carib instantly.

"I need you here," answered Morgan, who did not purpose to be deprived of that bodyguard upon whose watchfulness his life had so often depended. "I'll go," exclaimed young Teach, breaking through the crowd. "That's a brave heart!" said Morgan. "A line here!"

Instantly a light line was forthcoming. Teach tore off his jacket, laid aside his weapons, kicked off his shoes, took a turn of the line around his waist, made it fast, wrung Morgan's hand, watched his chance, leaped overboard, was caught by an onrushing wave and carried far toward the shore. The ebb of the roller carried him back seaward some distance, but he swam forward madly, and the next wave brought him a little nearer the beach. He was driven backward and forward, but each time managed to get a little nearer the shore line.

The whole ship's company stared after him, spontaneously cheering and yelling cries of encouragement in spite of the fact that he could not hear a single sound in the roaring, raging seas. Morgan himself tended the line, skillfully paying it out when necessary. In a few moments, although the time seemed hours to the watchers, the feet of Teach touched the shore, and, although the terrific undertow of the wave that had dropped him there almost bore him back again, yet by a superhuman exertion he managed to stagger forward, and the next moment they saw him fall prostrate on the sand.

Had he fainted or given way? They looked at him with bated breath, but after a little space they saw him rise slowly to his feet and stagger inland toward a low point where a lofty palm tree was writing and twisting in the fierce wind. He was too good a seaman not instantly to see what was required of him, for, waving his hand toward the ship, he at once began to succeeded by a third, strong enough to bear a man's weight. The buccaneer hauled this last in with great difficulty, for the distance was far and the wet rope was heavy. He climbed up and made it fast to the tree and then waited. As soon as he had done so there was a rush on the ship for the line, which had been made fast inboard temporarily. Morgan, however, interposed between the crew and the coveted way to safety.

"Back!" he shouted. "One at a time and the order as I appoint! You, L'Olonois, and you, and you," he cried, indicating certain men upon whom he could depend. "Go in succession, then haul a heavier rope ashore. We'll put a traveler with a boy's chair on it and send the abbe and these priests first of all."

There was something about that man that enforced obedience, whether they would or no. His orders were promptly obeyed and intelligently carried out by L'Olonois and his men, who first went ashore. A heavy hawser was dragged through the surf and made fast high up on the sturdy palm tree. On it they rigged a traveler and the chair, and then the priests were brought forward from the cabin. They were stricken with fear, but renewed their courage at the sight of the calmness of the abbe.

"Hornigold," said Morgan, "are you still faithful to me in this crisis?" "I shall obey you in all things—now," answered the boatswain.

"Swear it."

"By the old buccaneer faith," said the one-eyed, again adding the significant adverb, "now."

For a wonder, the captain paid no attention to the emphasis on the word "now."

"Can you keep your pistols dry?" "I can wrap them in oilskin and thrust them in my jacket."

"Go to the shore, then," said Morgan, "and receive this woman and these priests. March them away from the men to yonder clump of palms and guard them as you would your life. If any man approach you or them for any purpose shoot him dead without a word. I'll see that the others have no weapons. I've understood?"

"Aye, and shall obey."

"Go!"

The boatswain swung himself into the chair, and the men on the other end of the traveler pulled him to the shore, none the worse for his wetting. He opened his jacket, found the weapons dry, and waved his hand as a sign to Morgan that he was all right.

"Now, which of you will go first?" asked Morgan.

He turned instinctively to the tall abbe. She indicated first one and then another among the poor captives, and as they refused she turned to Morgan and, with a grave dignity, said in Spanish, of which he was a master, that she would go first to show the way and then the others would be in better heart to follow. She sat down on the boatswain's chair, which was simply a bit of wood held like the seat of a swing in a triangle of rope, made the sign of the cross and waved her hand. She was hauled ashore in an instant, with nothing worse to complain of than a drenching by the waves. By Hornigold's direction she walked past him toward the clump of palms which Morgan had indicated.

Then the Spanish priests took their turn, and after these reached the sand the rest of the crew were sent ashore. Morgan was careful to indicate each one's turn, so that he preserved a balance between the more reputable and the more degraded members of the crew both on ship and ashore. Among the last to go were the maroon and De Lussan. They had both received instructions, one to station himself at the palm tree, the other to cover the hawser where it ran along the shore before it entered the water. These precautionary orders which he had given were necessary, for when the last man had been hauled ashore and Morgan stepped into the chair for his turn one of the infuriated buccaneers, watching his chance, seized his jackknife, the only weapon that he had, for Morgan had been careful to make the men leave their arms on the ship, and made a rush for the rope to cut it and leave the captain to his fate. But De Lussan shot him dead and before the others could make a move Morgan stepped safely on the sand.

"That was well done," he cried, turning to the Frenchman. "Ah, mon capitaine," answered the other, "it was not from affection, but because you are necessary to us."

"Whatever it may be," returned the old man, "I owe much to you, and, scut-hole man, I'll not forget it."

The Frenchman, indifferent to Morgan's expressions of gratitude, shrugged his shoulders, turned away and made no reply. The transportation of so many people across the slender line had taken a long time. The sun, just beginning to break through the riven clouds, was near its setting; night would soon be upon them. They must hurry with what was yet to be done. Morgan sent Teach and the Brazilian back to the ship with instructions to gather up enough weapons to arm the crew and send them ashore. This was promptly done. Indeed, communication was not difficult now that the force of the gale was abating. The ship had been badly battered, but still held together and would hold unless the storm came up again. As the arms came ashore Morgan served them out to those men whom he considered most reliable, and, after throwing out a strong guard around the band, the rest sought shelter around huge driftwood fires which had been kindled by the use of flint and steel. There was hardly a possibility they would be observed in that deserted land, but still it was wise to take precaution.

PRESIDENT'S PART

In Pending Peace Parley Has Been Decided On, it Is Said.

NOT AS A MEDIATOR

But as "The Friendly Channel of Communication" Will He Serve the Interests of Peace.

The Czar is Now Believed to Be Ready to Hear Terms of Settlement.

Washington, June 8.—Preliminary peace negotiations between Russia and Japan are generally believed to be under way, and it is conceded that President Roosevelt will in all probability act not as a mediator, but as "the friendly channel of communication." There is as yet no official admission that Russia has accepted what

COUNT CASSINI.

Count Cassini in his cablegram to Count Lamsdorff last week described as the "offer of good will of the president," although instructions to the ambassador are believed to have reached here in a long cablegram which has been received at the Russian embassy.

All that can be authoritatively said regarding this cablegram is that it concerned Count Cassini's cablegram of last week.

Immediately upon his return to his legation last night after a long conference with the president, Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, began the preparation of a dispatch to his government upon which he was occupied until quite late. For the first time since the announcement of the Russian fleet the minister did not feel at liberty to comment upon any phase of the situation.

"The situation is too delicate at this moment for me to say anything," he remarked. "When there is something definite, perhaps I may have something to say. But I do not expect anything definite for some days."

It can be stated that the president through Mr. Takahira is endeavoring to get some definite idea regarding Japan's peace terms. Mr. Takahira is giving him all the assistance that he can, but the most he can do is to inform his government of the president's wishes and to emphasize his personal conviction that the president can be trusted absolutely to guard Japan's legitimate interests. Indeed, a fortunate phase of the present situation is that both Mr. Takahira and Count Cassini are personally convinced of the president's absolute impartiality and sincerity of purpose in the delicate undertaking which he has shouldered.

MR. MEYER'S CALL

Conference With Czar May Have Large Results.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—With Ambassador Meyer's delivery to the emperor yesterday afternoon of President Roosevelt's message tendering his good offices, the prospect of the president's efforts to bring the belligerents together in peace negotiations is believed to be distinctly brighter.

It is equally evident that the situation is an exceedingly delicate one, Ambassador Meyer absolutely declining to say a word regarding his visit to Tsarskoye Selo, the mission with which he is charged, or the emperor's response.

The center of interest is again transferred back to Washington. Count Cassini has doubtless received instructions from the emperor. However, it will probably require some little time to finally decide whether success shall crow the president's efforts to end the war. In the meantime it must be stated that there is not the slightest surface indications of any change in the situation regarding the continuation of the war.

Paris Has Hopeful View.

Paris, June 8.—The report that Russia had taken steps to learn through her ambassadors Japan's peace terms, further strengthens the hopeful view prevailing for the last three days. Considerable doubt prevails as to whether Tokio will be willing to put forward her terms without assurances that Russia is really desirous of peace. However, any movement on the part of Russia looking toward peace is interpreted as a most hopeful sign that peace councils are beginning to prevail in the highest quarters.

Thus Saved His Ships.

Vladivostok, June 8.—The failure of the Vladivostok squadron to put to sea and effect a diversion in favor of Admiral Rojestvensky at the time of the recent battle is explained to have been due to the utter absence of knowledge on the part of Rear Admiral Jessen as to whether Rojestvensky intended to circle Japan or attempt to force a passage through the straits of Korea. Jessen at no time was informed of the Russian commander's plans and was unable to co-operate with him.

Russia Will Deal Direct.

Vienna, June 8.—It is learned here that the Russian government has informed its diplomatic representatives abroad, including Count Cassini, the ambassador at Washington, that the time for Russia to conclude peace has not yet come and that when it does arrive Russia will open peace negotiations with Japan independent of foreign intervention.

Vladivostok Unconcerned.

Vladivostok, June 8.—The Russian naval disaster and the anticipated beginning of the siege of Vladivostok are in no way reflected in the attitude of the population. On the streets there is the usual noise and bustle of the promenading crowds, while at night the circus, comic opera and dance halls are running at full blast.

He Hears From Home.

Manila, June 8.—Rear Admiral Enquist received at 1 o'clock this morning the following cablegram from St. Petersburg: "Remain at Manila at the disposition of the American government. Effect repairs as much as possible.—Nicholai."

MAKING GOOD RECOVERY

and death. At one time her recovery was almost despaired of, but her wonderful vitality enabled her to rally, and it became possible to remove her to her home at Lake Ronkonkoma, L. I., where she is now out of all danger and rapidly convalescing.

Ball for the Editors.

Guthrie, O. T., June 8.—The twentieth annual convention of the National Editorial association was called to order yesterday afternoon at the Brooks opera house with 787 delegates present. Last night the delegates were tendered a reception and ball.

Smithsonian Institute Boodler.

Washington, June 8.—W. W. Carr, disbursing clerk of the Smithsonian Institution, was arrested, charged with embezzling $46,000 of the funds of that institution. Carr, it is said, admits his guilt.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

The National Editorial association is in session at Guthrie, Okla.

General Capriano Castro has been re-elected as president of Venezuela.

A dissolution of the union between Sweden and Norway has been declared by Norway.

Mrs. Charles Poston of Paradise Prairie, Ill., killed her former husband, Joseph West, as a result of a family quarrel.

There were 37,240 deaths in Indiana last year, an increase of nearly 6,000 over 1903. The total death rate per 100,000 was 1,401.8.

There were 4,978 deaths from tubercular diseases in Indiana last year, an increase of nearly 15 per cent over the preceding year.

William J. Bryan delivered the commencement address at Illinois college. The degree of doctor of laws was conferred on him by the college.

William W. Kerr, accountant of the Smithsonian Institution, was arrested on the charge of embezzlement, which according to his own confession, aggregates $46,000.

BY FORCE OF ARMS

Norwegians Will Maintain Their Declaration of Independence.

IF IT BE NECESSARY

Dissolution of Long Existing Union With Sweden Unanimously Declared by the Storting.

King Oscar's Continued Refusal to Grant Separate Consular Representation Leads to Action.

Christiana, Norway, June 8.—The Norwegian parliament has voted unanimously to dissolve the union which has existed for many years between Norway and Sweden. This action followed the refusal of King Oscar to sanction the bill recently passed by the parliament providing for a separate consular service for Norway. A breach between the countries has been expected for a long time.

The present government will temporarily assume the rights which the king had heretofore.

The parliament also sent a statement to the king stating that no ill will was entertained toward him, notifying him of the action taken and asking the king to allow some prince of the Bernadotte house to assume the Norwegian crown.

The belief is general that King Oscar will yield and grant the demand. If he does agree and appoints a prince of the house of Bernadotte as requested, it is thought possible that he will select Prince Gustave Adolphe, son of the Crown Prince Gustave, who is to be married to the Princess Margaret of Connaught on June 15. By doing this the two countries would again be united when Gustave mounts the throne in Sweden in succession to his father.

The Popular Feeling.

"Norway from today is a fully independent and sovereign state." This is the text of the editorials in the Norwegian newspapers, and it reflects the spirit with which the people of Norway accept the action of the storting when it proclaimed King Oscar no longer king of Norway. The storting will if necessary defend the step taken by force of arms. If a prince of the house of Bernadotte should consent to occupy the throne of Norway he must give up all idea of succession to the Swedish throne. It is learned that Crown Prince Gustave will return immediately from Berlin.

Swedes Excited but Calm.

Stockholm, June 8.—The Norwegian coup d'etat was answered here last night by a great patriotic demonstration of loyalty to and sympathy with King Oscar. A great procession accompanied by bands went to Rosendal castle, where the bands played the national anthem. In a few minutes the king and other members of the royal family appeared on a balcony of the castle and were enthusiastically cheered by the demonstrators, while a number of ladies advanced from the crowd and presented the king with a bouquet. Though greatly excited over the situation, the populace remains outwardly calm. King Oscar held a council last evening at which the situation was considered.

Europe Locks Askance.

London, June 8.—The revolution in Norway, though anticipated and peacefully effected, has come on Europe with unexpected suddenness, and the question is asked with some anxiety whether it will not bring international complications. Had Russia not been involved in a different war in the far East it is doubtful whether Norway would have taken the present momentous step, which is not likely to be regarded with approval by European powers. Emperor William's omission of his customary tour of Norway this year seems to indicate his disapproval of the Norwegian policy, and the fact that the coup d'etat is not unlikely to eventuate in the establishment of a Norwegian republic would alone be a reason why the step should not commend itself to the monarchial powers.

South Bend, Ind., June 8.—The ten-year-old son of Cory Huss was bitten by a rattlesnake, and is in a serious condition.

SLAIN BY BURGLAR

Columbus, O., Policeman Killed While Discharging His Duty.

Columbus, O., June 8.—Daniel E. Davis, a policeman, was shot and killed last night in an encounter with a burglar at the residence of Horace Chapman on East Broad street. Mr. Chapman, who is a prominent coal operator and at one time Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, is now in Europe with his family. The residence has been closed during their absence. The presence of burglars in the residence last night was revealed by an alarm connected with the district office, and a wagon load of police was sent to the residence. Two men were surrounded in the house. One jumped off the roof of a veranda and exchanged shots with Officer Davis, who was instantly killed. One of the burglars was captured, the other escaped.

Train Plunges Through Bridge.

Menomonee, Wis., June 8.—A passenger train on the Wisconsin Central west bound, plunged into Red Cedar river from the high steel bridge one mile west of Colfax. Engineer George Phillips, Fireman Severns and five tramps who were riding on the blind baggage car are missing and are believed to be drowned. The baggage-car climbed out of a window and the mail clerk crawled through a ventilator as the cars plunged into the water. The passengers were badly bruised and shaken up, but none was fatally hurt. The centerpiece of the bridge had been undermined by high water.

Date of Mitchell's Trial.

Washington, June 8.—The department of justice announces that the trial of the Oregon land fraud cases will begin at Portland next Monday. On that day Senator Mitchell, senior member of Oregon's delegation in congress, will be called for trial on some of the indictments pending against him. Under indictments of from one to twelve counts each are almost half a hundred leading citizens of Oregon.

Sweeping Curtailment Demanded.

New York, June 8.—Resolutions suggesting radical reforms in the management of the Equitable Life Assurance Society were adopted at the meeting of the directors. These affect all the high officials and preface a sweeping curtailment of the society's general expenses. The resolutions also imply many important changes in the financial policy of the society.

Negotiations Called Off.

Chicago, June 8.—After a conference lasting for two hours between the employers' association and the committee appointed by the teamsters' joint council with full power to settle the strike, all negotiations were declared off and there is no immediate probability of a settlement.

The Toilers in Our Factories.

No workmen in the world can do so much or use the same intelligence that our own American workmen. That is why America is now beating the world in manufactures. All due to the brain and muscle of our Yankee men and women.

Unfortunately where there is smoke, dirt and dust and little sunlight there also can be found the germs of disease. Nature's great disinfectant is sunlight. It is in the factory, the workshop, the office, that men and women suffer from diseases which are in the dust and the bad air. Such disease germs enter into the blood through the lungs or stomach.

After years of experience in an active practice, Dr. R. V. Pierce discovered a remedy that is a blood-maker and tissue-builder, at the same time alleviates a cough. He called it Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—an alternative extract that assists in the digestion and assimilation of the food—so that the blood gets its elements from the products of digestion, the liver at the same time is started into activity and there is perfect elimination of waste matter. The germs of grip, malaria, catarrh or consumption find a fertile field if the body is not kept in perfect order and the blood pure.

Because the stomach is diseased there is a diminution of the red corpuscles of the blood. This is why one is sleepy, languid, nervous and irritable. Sensitive stomachs groan aloud at the irritating cod liver oils, but they will get all the food elements the tissues require by using the "Golden Medical Discovery."

The "Discovery" is absolutely a non-alcoholic and non-narcotic medicine. There is nothing else "just as good."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the best laxative for old and young people. They cure constipation and biliousness.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE arrived in New York Thursday from an ocean voyage and is expected in Indianapolis soon.

GENERAL H. V. BOYNTON who was buried at Washington City Wednesday was a distinguished soldier. Rev. J. M. Baxter, of this city, served under him for three years during the civil war and therefore knew him quite well.

AT the opening of the exposition at Portland a dapper young man and a lady who had read all the books on etiquette undertook to give Uncle Joe Cannon a few pointers. But Uncle Joe has been around some himself and gave them to understand a few things. He has never been in the habit of conducting himself according to rules laid down by the social aristocracy.

ANARCHIST

Attempts to Take Life of Vice President Fairbanks.

An unsuccessful attempt to take the life of Vice President Fairbanks was made by an anarchist at Flint, Michigan, Wednesday. The Vice President was there to make an address at the laying of the corner stone of the new Federal building there.

James McConnell, an anarchist forced his way through the crowd up to the speaker's stand. Just as he was pulling a revolver from his hip pocket three detectives pounced upon him and removed him to the police station.

In McConnell's pocket was anarchist literature and the route set out in detail the Vice President took on his return from Portland.

SAW NAVAL BATTLE COLUMBUS CROWD.

Lieutenant Talks Interestingly of Japanese Warfare.

Lieutenant Frank P. Baldwin, U. S. N., who is here visiting the Blish family was but six or seven miles distant from the first naval battle between the Japanese and Russians at Chemulpo on the 8 of February, 1905. He was on the ship "Vicksburg" at the time and he and his crew were severely criticized by the papers of the eastern states of our country because they made no efforts whatever to rescue Russian sailors who were so sorely in need of help. On account of the distance from which he witnessed the battle, Lieut. Baldwin can give no definite description of the workings of each side. He was executive officer on the ship and so could not go nearer to the scene of the battle, but sent the younger members of the crew and the ship's doctor to render such assistance as they might be able. To him it was but a confused cannonading and even though a shot would be heard distinctly, the sound could not convey what they wanted to know most—which side was being disabled. At one time only he saw a shot which demolished the whole ship and killed the entire crew. The Russian fleet was hit by big shells about eight or ten times and were practically disabled when far from the Japs. The whole battle at long range lasted about fifty-five minutes.

For the greater part of the past year he has been at Manila on the flag ship "Rainbow." He saw no more battles of the Jap-Russian War other than the battle of Chemulpo and with difficulty received the reports therefrom, for the newspaper reports at Manila were not to be relied upon as they were as a rule fictitious and were also as usually denied on the day following publication.

Lieut. Baldwin speaks of the wonder with which all military men and newspaper correspondents view the interesting system of transporting the Japanese soldiers. He himself watched the transport system of 50,000 troops and a work of intelligence it most certainly was.

In 1895 Lieut. Baldwin visited Japan and even at that time the whole body of Japanese were looking forward to but one end, that of taking and possessing Manchuria. One Japanese naval officer by whom he was entertained taught his boys from early infancy that their work in life was to conquer Russia and he would impress it upon their minds with the words, "We must beat Russia." The subtleness, craftiness and ability of the Japanese to grasp a situation, as he says, stand forth above everything else. And yet all that they do has been learned through ten years of careful preparation. For that length of time the Japs have sent spies through all the country for which they are fighting and their knowledge of it is almost incredible.

Lieut. Baldwin is spending a short time with friends before entering upon a year of shore duty in the New York yards. He will receive an appointment from the naval department, which will most probably give him inspection duties in the department of steam engineering. He is a most affable gentleman and exhibits the manner and uses the admired vernacular of the naval officer.

SEEING AMERICA.

Wonderful Scenic Trip Across Rocky Mountains to Oregon Exposition.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23rd and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the Oregon Exposition, in addition to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the scenic wonders of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensive than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the west. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of conventions, through time and passenger service apply to ticket agent of Pennsylvania Lines.

HAT BUILDER HERE.

George Crocker, An Unique Character, Strikes Seymour.

Seymour has an unique character in her boundaries today, in the person of George Crocker, of Binghamton, N. Y., 70 years old. Mr. Crocker has probably seen more of the United States than any other man in the country. There may be those who have traveled more miles, but none who has visited more cities or taken more time for observation.

Mr. Crocker has been on the road now for forty years, and has visited Seymour before. He was here twenty years ago and has today met some of the men whose hats he made over on that visit. He makes his living as he travels, for he is an expert re-builder of men's hats by trade and carries his kit of tools necessary for cleaning and reblocking hats with him. He works fast and deftly, and finds sufficient work to pay for his transportation and his board at the best hotels, as well as to lay by a bit for a rainy day. He fixes a hat right on the spot while the customer waits, and does highly satisfactory work.

Mr. Crocker, despite his 70 years, is as active and spry as many younger men. The story of his travels makes an interesting tale and newspapers throughout the country give him nice notices.

Long Bill Robertson of Hometown was in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, of Houston, spent today here.
